British Informatics Olympiad Final

11–13 April 1997

Sponsored by Data Connection

Playing Games

Suppose you are writing a program so that a complicated game, such as chess, can be played against the computer. How would you go about writing the part that plays the game for the computer? You are free to mention anything you feel would be relevant, such as algorithms and time/space considerations.